

CREATIVE WRITING READING SERIES

Annual Faculty Reading

Andy Weaver

Andy Weaver specializes in contemporary Canadian and American poetry and poetics, with an emphasis on formally innovative and experimental texts. He has published three books of poetry, This (2015), gangson (2011), and Bees (2005), as well as critical articles on Darren Wershler and Robert Duncan, among others. His current research focuses on the relationship between contemporary poetry and political anarchy.

Julia Creet

Julia Creet is an award-winning critic, non-fiction writer and documentary filmmaker, whose work has been published and screened internationally. Her nonfiction has appeared in Reader's Digest, Toronto Life, and Exile and a new book on the industry of family history, DNA Giveaway: Genetic Genealogy and the Business of Family is forthcoming from U. Mass Press.

David B. Goldstein

David B. Goldstein is an award-winning poet, critic, and food writer, whose work has appeared in magazines and newspapers across Canada and the US. In 2016 he released his second poetry collection, Lost Originals, with BookThug. The Globe and Mail called his first collection, Laws of Rest, "sly, strange poems one can live within."

Michael Helm

Michael Helm's novels are After James, Cities of Refuge, In the Place of Last Things, and The Projectionist, all national or international prize finalists. His nonfiction includes writings on social justice workers, bioscientists, and reading in translation; and critical essays on fiction, poetry, photography, and painting. He's an editor at Brick magazine.

Jennifer Duncan

Jennifer Duncan is the author of two books, Sanctuary & Other Stories and Frontier Spirit: Brave Women of the Klondike, as well as of numerous poems, short stories and book reviews in literary journals and newspapers. She co-designed the original curriculum for the Yukon School of Art and innovated a community-based writing program in Dawson City. She is currently completing her first novel and her PhD in Language, Culture and Teaching, specializing in creative writing pedagogy.

Priscila Uppal

Priscila Uppal is an internationally acclaimed poet, novelist, memoirist and playwright (Griffin Poetry Prize, Governor General's Award, and Hilary Weston Prize finalist).

Wednesday October 4th, 2017 | 1:30pm - 3:00pm
305 Founders College | ALL ARE WELCOME
Light refreshments will be served