Teaching and Development Committee Presents:

Developing and Refining Your Teaching Philosophy Statement

A teaching philosophy statement is a unique and personal statement about your beliefs and values in teaching and learning. Although we teach every day and act in ways we believe in, it isn't always easy to articulate these beliefs and values. During the session you'll have an opportunity to engage in activities designed to help you identify and articulate your beliefs and values in teaching and learning. Through a variety of techniques, this workshop will help you identify and explore your own beliefs and values. Whether you are refining or developing your teaching philosophy statement, please join us!

Facilitator: Dr. Natasha May, Teaching Commons
