TA SEMINAR #2

Effective Assessment Strategies

Since 2003, Jon has facilitated seminars on good assessment practices for the History Department, the Centre for Support of Teaching/Teaching Commons, and the LA&PS Foundations program. This workshop focuses on practical advice and active classroom learning. Participants can expect to emerge from this 90 minute session with a variety of different assessment models, some advice on their application, and some practice at using them.

Jon Sufrin Ph.D is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Writing. He holds graduate degrees in History (York) and a BA in Humanities (York). As the preceding sentence suggests, he's been a York a long time (25+ years) and seen many changes. In the interim, he's taken a turn as a program coordinator, won a University-wide teaching award, and enjoyed running various faculty and university-wide essay competitions. Now in the Writing Department, he serves as the LA&PS Writing Centre Director, and teaches courses in composition, damage control and sports writing.
